

Manuscript Submission

ESJ welcomes papers on this special topic, as well as those on general topics of education. The following are the guidelines for article submission. Prospective contributors of a paper on the special topic are asked to indicate this in its introduction. Articles should be written in English and sent to the JERA by electric submission (jsse@oak.ocn.ne.jp). They should be written within 6,000 words with summaries of around 300 words. Contributors whose native language is not English are required to have their manuscripts revised with the assistance of those whose native language is English. Prospective authors are also asked to provide up to 5 keywords at the top of their paper.

Importantly, prospective contributors are not allowed to submit a paper that was already published, or has been submitted for publication, in a journal or a book in English, Japanese, or any other languages. If there is a published article, or a submitted article, written by contributors on a related subject, please send it together with the new article for review. Thus, the literal English translation of a paper written and published in non-English languages cannot be accepted, but an article that has been significantly modified and adapted to an English-language audience may be accepted through the review process.

The Editorial Board of Educational Studies in Japan would like to ask the contributors to please follow the following format in your paper.

- 1) Please write the author's name and his/her institutional affiliation as well as e-mail address on a sheet different from the paper's body.
- 2) The abstract of the paper then follows, for which a 5-space margin should be placed on both sides.
- 3) Please use Arabic numbers for sections of the paper.
- 4) Please follow the APA (American Psychological Association) citation style. If you have additional notes, please follow the system of endnotes. Endnotes will be inserted between the main body and references.
- 5) If you use books or articles written in languages other than English or Japanese, please indicate the original language of the publication at the end of each reference as shown in the example below.

Huang, Ji (1982). Philosophy of Education. Beijing:Beijing Normal University Press [published in Chinese].

The non-JERA members contributing are required, in principle, to take up topics related to education in Japan, its comparison with those of other countries, and theoretical reflections on educational issues for Japan.

In addition to research papers, ESJ accepts research notes. Being concise introductory analyses of historical or contemporary sources of educational interest, these notes may discuss topics such as educational theory, the history of educational studies, or the current state of education in Japan.

For both papers and research notes, figures, notes, and references should be included in the word count. All articles should be received by September 15.

Please note that the deadline for all articles has been changed from September 30 to September 15.
